Sarah Jessica Parker has created her fair share of trends with the help of costume designers, first in HBO's Sex and the City, the two films that preceded the series, and the first season of the reboot And Just Like That, which is streaming by Max.

Now in the reboot, in its second season and ninth episode with just two more to go, SJP's jewelry isn't trending as much as it did during the HBO series ; rather, it is in tune with them. Perhaps this is because Molly Rogers (who worked on the SATC series and films with original costume designer Patricia Field) and Danny Santiago have been scouting freelance designers for SJP, who has killer jewelry instincts in his real life.

Rogers and Santiago have continued the tradition of finding emerging designers for Carrie Bradshaw's SJP character. The actress and the dynamic costume designer duo have designed jewelry that has grown with her. Some are even pieces that were used in the first season. But in the second season of the reboot, she wears pieces similar to those we see on the runway, online, and in more popular jewelry stores. Will Carrie ever again wear pieces that make women flock to buy certain jewelry like yellow gold nameplate necklaces and earrings, diamond multi-horseshoe pendants, ropes and strings of pearls, or delicately pierced diamond necklaces? , among other trends? Time will tell, but I think what Carrie wears in the second series is exactly the kind of jewelry that other women want to wear or already wear: layered pendants and necklaces, in particular, multi-bracelets, hoop earrings and what have you. It looks personalized. rings.

As for the rest of the cast, they all have identifiable appearances, which has always helped define their different personalities on the show and still does.

But for now, let's look at some of the jewelry Carrie wears in different scenes and episodes during season two.

The Emily P. Wheeler Wrap Bead Necklace is knotted in silk and crafted in 18K rose gold, pink sapphire, morganite, white agate, conch shell, pink opal and pink enamel. She wears a shell pendant between the folded beads. Below, the necklaces are complemented by blue topaz floral marquetry earrings by Silvia Furmanovich.
